

W.C.T.U. Honors Past President

Over forty members and friends of the W.C.T.U. attended the meeting held last Thursday at the home of Mrs. Harry Gabel to hear Mrs. Geeson's splendid report of the provincial convention held at Edmonton on October 6-7-8.

Mrs. Grace Knight of Edmonton was re-elected president for her third term, and all other members of the provincial executive were re-elected.

There are thirty local unions with 439 active members in Alberta.

Of the 26 national prizes in the scientific temperance instruction essay contest, 12 were won by Alberta school children.

Didsbury "Y" was awarded the banner for the largest number of new members gained during the year. Miss Edith Hunsperger, past president, was present to receive it.

Following Mrs. Geeson's report, Mrs. Cunningham and Mrs. Oldham on behalf of the local W.C.T.U. presented the retiring president, Mrs. H. M. Reiber, with an electric heating pad and an illuminated address in appreciation of her many years of faithful and untiring service and the wish that she would continue in the local work as honorary president.

Mrs. Reiber very fittingly expressed her thanks and willingness to aid in every way possible.

Several musical selections were rendered during the afternoon which were enjoyed by all present. Dainty refreshments served by the hostess and assistants brought the program to a close.

Curlers Plan for Coming Season

At the annual meeting of the Didsbury Curling Club held Monday evening it was decided to open the season with a President vs. Vice-President competition, the losers to pay for the suppers. It was also decided to accept the membership of all green curlers at half the cost of the regular dues in an effort to increase the membership and create interest.

This being the 30th anniversary of the club it was planned to play hosts at this supper to the five original members of the club, who are still active curlers. These are W. G. Liesemer, A. G. Studer, A. Brusso, J. V. Berscht and N. S. Clarke. W. G. Liesemer was the first president.

Endeavoring to make dues as low as possible, the club set a maximum of $7.00, but decided to budget the expenses for the year and if sufficient members sign up to meet the estimate, together with a small surplus, the fees will be reduced accordingly.

Plans were laid for the holding of open, mixed and school bonspiels, but details were left until a later meeting. It was also decided to again affiliate with the Royal Canadian Association and challenge for the MacDonald Cup.

J. A. McGhee was re-elected president and J. W. Halton secretary. Other officers were:

Injured While Drilling Well

William Moon sustained injuries while drilling a well on the Eubank farm Friday afternoon. The shaft at the top of the derrick of the well drill broke and fell, hitting Mr. Moon on the shoulder, and in falling he struck his head on the bailer.

He was moved to the hospital where it was found that although painful the injuries were not serious, no bones being broken. He was able to leave the hospital Monday.

WEDDINGS

On Saturday, October 10th at the home of Henry Gorr, John Henry Edwards and Mary Gorr. The couple were attended by the bride's sister and the bridegroom's brother. Rev. J. R. Geeson performed the ceremony in the presence of about fifty guests.

BRADFORD—MADOCHIE
A quiet but impressive wedding was solemnized in the new M.B.C. Church at Bergen on October 16th, when Lucille Mae Madoche, of Didsbury, became the bride of Harold Edwin Bradford, of Dovercourt, Alberta. Rev. Oscar Snyder performed the ceremony.

The happy couple left for Sundre to stay for a short time with the bride's mother. Then they are motoring to Dovercourt where Mr. Bradford has taken charge of a pastorate. With their many friends we wish them much happiness and success in their labors on this western home mission field.

Agriculture Society Annual Meeting

It was decided at the annual meeting of the Didsbury Agricultural Society held on Tuesday afternoon that they recommend that a fair be held next year.

The secretary's report showed that the fair held this summer had been very successful, especially from an exhibition standpoint. There were 730 entries, which included 116 horses, 131 cattle, 33 sheep and 29 swine. The number of exhibitors who made entries was 117.

The financial report showed that there would be approximately $200 available to pay out in prize money, and as the arrangement was that the prize money would be paid pro rata as to money available, it was decided to pay one-sixth of the prize money offered in the prize list. The prize money will be paid out as soon as the grant is received from the provincial government.

It was decided to send a delegate to the convention of the Alberta Fairs Association and Mr. Harold Brennan, the president, was elected delegate.

The following officers were elected:

Hon. President: C. F. Rennie
President: Harold Brennan

WEEKLY SERMONETTE

How difficult it is for an individual to change his character is well set forth in an Eastern proverb: "If anyone tells you that a mountain has changed its place, believe it; but if anyone says that a man has changed his character, believe it not." Only the power of the gospel of Jesus Christ makes new men.

Assistance Needed

While it is a matter for congratulation that Churchill, the Hudson's Bay port, is enjoying a record shipping season this year, it is passing strange that active steps to promote increased traffic for the route, for the establishment of which the west fought for over 50 years, should be left to "outsiders."

For better than half a century, farmers and business men of the prairie provinces fought against great odds to establish the Hudson Bay route by the construction of a railway line, and terminal facilities on the Bay to handle traffic which they hoped would eventually result in better returns for agricultural products shipped out and reduced prices for merchandise shipped in.

The first objective was achieved in 1932 when the S.S. Pennyworth steamed into Churchill Harbor with a cargo of commodities from overseas for Western Canadian consumption and left again with a full cargo of Western Canadian grain for European markets. Since that time there has been an annual increase in the number of inward and outward bound vessels making use of the route until this year, 14 boats have entered the harbor with a possibility that the number would be increased to 16 before the close of navigation.

While, however, these results indicate some progress in the development of traffic by the short and direct route between Western Canada and Europe, the development is not rapid enough to ensure the full benefits which prairie producers and consumers should be reaping from the operation of this great project. If the route is to be of maximum service and benefit to the west, the people of the west, for whose advantage these facilities were devised, must take active steps to promote the use of the service to its greatest possible extent and as speedily as conditions permit.

Recently two notable and interested authorities testified, almost on the same day, that this is not being done; that the people of the prairies are not taking as much interest as they should in speeding up traffic and that, in effect, they are apathetic.

Said R. S. Dalgleish of Newcastle-on-Tyne, England, chairman of the Board of the Dalgleish Shipping Line, which company has operated more boats in and out of Churchill since the inception of the route than any other organization, in an interview: "I do not think that Canada has done enough to develop Churchill and the Hudson Bay route," and added that instead of 14 ships entering Churchill Harbor this season there should have been sixty.

The other authority who expressed similar views was A. L. Lawes, vice-president of the Montreal Shipping Company, who, in an interview after a visit to Churchill, was critical of the apathy "in many places" concerning the development of the northern seaport.

Coming from the sources they do, these comments indicate that these facilities are capable of providing much greater service to the people of the prairie provinces than they are now doing, provided the people most vitally interested in the development of the route take the necessary steps to ensure the maximum use of them.

As is intimated by another authority, the greatest possible benefits in the way of reduced costs can only be secured by a big volume of business. This is axiomatic in practically all commercial undertakings.

Mr. Lawes told the press that the French Louis Dreyfus and Co. line was shipping out five million bushels of wheat this season through the Bay channel and said that ten million bushels was a reasonable objective for 1937, but he gave a specific instance of loss of traffic as a result of failure to furnish commodities which could have been handled had they been available.

He reported that the Montreal Shipping Company has ordered the steamship "Brandon" fitted out to handle livestock. "However," he added, "arrangements were not begun in time and no cattle were available for the dates on which the ship could come to the port."

It is true that the On-to-the-Bay Association has done much to promote the development of trade via the Hudson Bay route since the railway line and terminal facilities were completed by aiding successful efforts to secure reduced carrying charges and insurance rates as well as extension of the navigation season, but these efforts must be aided and abetted to the greatest possible extent by government agencies, business concerns, farmer organizations and individuals, if the most is to be made of the new route.

The Hudson Bay route, like Topsy, must not be allowed to just grow haphazardly, but its development must be accelerated by vigorous effort and alert salesmanship on the part of all citizens of the prairie provinces.

Oil Made Good Light

Natives Of Hawaii Used Nuts From Kuku Tree

Lumbang or kukui oil, obtained from the nuts of the kuku, or candle-nut, tree, are occasionally used in the manufacture of some kinds of paint. The candle-nut tree is native to Polynesia and is widely cultivated in Asia, Hawaii and the Philippines. Formerly the Hawaiians strung the nuts together on sticks and used them for lighting their houses. Hence the name "candle-nut."

For The Chickens

A sudden demand for lipstick by prim elderly ladies and grim-visaged sons of toil at Ancaster, Ontario, puzzled a merchant so much that he finally inquired of an elderly farmer why he wanted the cosmetic. "To color the combs and wattles of chickens I am showing at county fairs," was the answer.

Bald headed men may be interested to know that the common fly has color preferences. It dislikes green and red, cannot endure primrose tint, and prefers orange and white. Primrose pates should be fashionable during the fly season.

Raw Asbestos Found

Deposits Discovered Near New Gold Fields In Ontario

Deposits of raw asbestos have been found north and south of the gold fields recently discovered 11 miles north of Arden, Ont. It was learned

This tiny village of 350 population, continued to attract mining men and prospectors from widely separated sections of Canada and the United States as all reports tended to confirm the optimistic expressions of local residents as to the richness of the new gold fields. The gold vein runs ten miles east and west straight through the bush country, and extends about three and one-half miles in width, according to experts.

Staking of claims continued over a wide area adjoining the actual vein, first discovered last June by T. J. Alexander and Mervin Newton, local men. They have sold their claims to Hollinger mines. They reportedly received $75,000. Hollinger engineers also have secured much additional property in the district. Representatives of all other leading Canadian mining companies are on the ground taking up options and buying out right from prospectors willing to sell.

Canada's New Coinage

Reported That New Designs Will Appear On Different Denominations

When Canada's new coinage is issued, one of the coins may gladden the eye of western Canadians. It may bear on the reverse side a grain elevator or a similar prairie scene.

Big changes are being planned in the new coins, which will bear the head of King Edward and which are expected to be issued in 1937.

The head of the king, of course, will be upon one side of the coin and will face to the left. But designs for the reverse side are still under consideration and suggestions are being narrowed down.

The idea is to abandon the traditional wreath of maple leaves and provide a new and different design for each one of the 1-, 5-, 10- and 25-cent coins.

As a concession to sectional claims and to emphasize the resources and interests in Canada, the designs under consideration are of a wide variety.

One coin will likely show a fishing schooner—the famous Bluenose—another a peak in the Rockies, a third a fish or game subject, and a fourth a grain elevator or some prairie topic.

There is some talk that the 50-cent coin—always an unpopular one—may be discontinued.

The suggested designs will follow that seen upon the recent $1 silver coin, which bears a canoe paddled by an Indian and a voyageur.

Canadian topics have been pictured on Canadian stamps—such as the Bluenose, the peak of the Rockies, a prairie scene of harvesting and others.

Latest Surgical Discovery

Tests Will Show Susceptibility To Shock In Operations

A corner at least of the always dangerous curtain of unconsciousness that hides surgical and post-operative shock was lifted by a physician at the American Congress on Physical Therapy. He revealed for the first time that tests could be conducted which tended to prevent prospective death in cases other than emergencies.

Dr. C. Ward Crampton, chairman of the committee of preventive medicine of the New York County Medical Society, discovered that persons whose vasotone efficiency (condition of the blood vessels) was dangerously low nearly always experienced marked decrease in blood pressure when made to stand, and a simultaneous and extreme quickening of the pulse.

Dr. Crampton told the medical men that with charts he had worked out over a long period of years surgeons could tell with the simple tests whether a patient about to be operated upon would develop shock.

"When the readings are low, but immediate surgery is imperative, the surgeon must expect trouble, employ speed, spare trauma and select less severe operative procedure."

Solves Problem Of Growers

X-Ray Used To Determine Quality Of Vegetables

One of Minnesota's vegetable growers' greatest problems—that of ascertaining the quality of their products—has been solved by a University of Minnesota plant physiologist.

R. B. Harvey, of the university farm, has perfected a method by which he can peer into the heart of potatoes and other agricultural products.

Employing the use of an X-ray and a physician's fluoroscope, Harvey can detect those vegetables with hollow hearts and thus rate accurately products by testing samples in large quantities.

After Ten-Year Blindness

Young Man Gets Real Thrill When Sight Comes Back

After ten years of total blindness, Roy K. Kendrick of Bondi, Australia, suddenly recovered his sight while shaving.

Kendrick was blinded in a soccer match in 1926 when he was 22 years old and had reconciled himself to the doctors' verdict that he would never see again.

"When I was shaving," he said, "I felt a strange sensation in my eyes. I thought I could see my face in the mirror, but imagination has played some strange tricks on me in the last few years. I rushed out of my room and saw the sky—blue, with white clouds."

"Then I went back to finish my shaving. I dressed by touch in the way I have learned, and then went out into the street. It was all vague, but what I felt could not be described. Buildings I remember having passed scores of times. I could see them—and women dressed very differently from ten years ago. I kept noticing things and reading advertisements—anything. Then I ran back to the hotel, overjoyed, laughing, crying and kissing everyone. I couldn't help it. It was difficult to focus at first, but I am getting used to my eyes again. When I want anything, my first impulse is to reach out to touch it rather than look."

If Motor License Exchange In Empire Was Established

A resolution seeking the co-operation of the Automobile Association and the Royal Automobile Club of Great Britain and the allied automobile clubs of the sister Dominions, in a concerted campaign for the establishment of motor license exchange throughout the British Empire, was unanimously passed at the 23rd annual general meeting of the Canadian Automobile Association at the National Club in Toronto.

It was asserted that the governmental red tape and customs barriers to intra-empire motor touring greatly exceed those relating to travel between Canada and the United States.

An Annual Affair

Police Department Of Tokio Manages Fly-Swatting Campaign

In the greatest fly-swatting outburst on record the citizens of Tokio, Japan, annihilated 98,704,706 flies in a single day. With true Japanese thoroughness, each fly was duly counted and recorded as children and grown-ups trooped into the police stations with their captures. An inhabitant of Chitaya ward won the first prize with a record of 200,191 flies. The anti-fly campaign is an annual fixture. It is managed by the police department as a health measure.

Canada May Be Called Upon To Assist Great Britain In Rearmament Programme

A possibility that Canada's manufacturing and mining resources will be enlisted to assist Great Britain in accelerating her rearmament programme was under consideration. The government has discovered that the rate of progress has been too slow. There is a shortage of skilled labor in certain essential industries, particularly in aircraft construction, and it is felt that Britain will be compelled to give contracts to Canadian firms.

Britain has not forgotten the assistance lent by Canada during the last war, particularly in submarine construction, but at present none of the leading munitions firms have any knowledge of contracts likely to go to Canada. All they will admit is that the possibility must be seriously considered.

The manufacturing of plywood for airplanes from Canadian logs will begin at Manchester within the next few weeks. Until recently plywood has been imported from Germany. It is now understood that the necessary machinery for manufacturing plywood has been imported, and under the supervision of German experts a factory will be constructed which will more than supply British aircraft requirements by use of Canadian logs. In the essential rearmament industries, with the exception of aircraft, there is a good supply of labor. Workers, however, are reluctant to leave their homes for areas where Britain's new munition works are being established. The munition bases are being constructed at places which are far removed from open air attacks such as the west of England, Wales, Hereford, Pembroke, Cornwall and Ulster.

The skilled laborers from Glasgow and London and the northeast coast do not want to leave their homes, and for this reason, as much as any other, Canadian manufacturers may be enlisted in the rearmament programme.

It is expected that the Labor party at its next conference, will, in spite of bitter dissension among its own group, agree to support the government's rearmament programme.

Clothed In Milk

Milk Seems To Have Been Put To Many Uses

No, it is not a printer's error for "silk." And here is the story, as told by Dr. B. L. Herrington, of Cornell University. It seems that ten quarts of milk are skimmed to make one quart of cream. The problem of what to do with the nine quarts of skim-milk has long worried the farmers and dairymen. Of course they could feed it to the livestock, but there was taste. So the chemists took the matter up. One of the widest industrial uses of skim-milk is paper-making. The glossy surface of expensive coated paper contains milk casein, pressed and dyed. Billiard balls, too, are amongst its products. But Mussolini's chemists have beaten them all, for Dino Grandi, Italian ambassador to Great Britain, strode along the London streets the other day in a suit that looked like wool, but that was actually made of milk. Italian chemists say they can now make casein into fabrics like cotton, wool or silk at lower cost than from the natural fibres. Thus it comes to pass that a man may be clothed as well as fed with milk. And all we need say about it is what old Biddy Callaghan would be saying if we could call her back and tell her the story: "Och, childer dear, sure wond'ers will never cease!" The New Outlook.

Would Ban British Woolens

A petition to the Japanese Department of Commerce for the restriction of British woolen goods entering Japan has been made by the president of the Japan Federation of Woolen Weavers' Guilds. Signs of a big increase in British woolen imports have made the federation uneasy.

Autumn Work In The Garden

Methods Of Protecting Perennial Plants In The Fall

As soon as the tops of the plants are frozen or have died off, they should be removed and burned. If the tops of perennial plants are left on the bed all winter there is danger that they may harbour disease spores and insects which may have been present on the plants. As soon as the ground is frozen a mulch of old manure, straws or evergreen branches can be applied to help to hold the snow. Sometimes the stems of the plants are left for this purpose but it is not recommended. Some plants which are frequently attacked by slugs can be protected by covering the crown with old coal ashes. The same thing is useful around foxgloves and hollyhocks to prevent water standing in the crowns and then freezing. If the leaves of hollyhocks and foxgloves are very numerous some of them can be removed.

September and October are the months when spring flowering bulbs are planted and clumps of them in a perennial border are greatly appreciated in spring. Besides Daffodils and Tulips which can be obtained in many varieties and colours there are other attractive bulbous plants such as Chionodoxa—Glory of the Snow, Scilla sibirica—Siberian Squill, both of which have blue flowers. Crocus which can be obtained in white, yellow and purple varieties. These are amongst the earliest of flowers to bloom in the spring. Muscari—Grape Hyacinth with dark blue flowers like a hyacinth in miniature bloom a little later.

Lilies are also grown from bulbs which should be planted in October. Some of the best and easiest to grow are L. amabile, L. tenuifolium, L. regale, L. Willmottiae and L. Henryi.

Built To Measurement

Horseshoes Must Be Exactly Right Says Veteran Blacksmith

A fine racing horse, says W. A. Haddox of Canton, Ohio, veteran blacksmith and authority on race-horse shoeing, is more finicky about the shoes he wears than a debutante going to her coming-out party.

"Give a spirited horse a shoe that is an ounce off-weight or a fraction of an inch too thick, and his chances of winning will be lost," Haddox said. "On the other hand, like human beings, horses have foot ailments that can be cured and the horse built into a winner by proper shoeing."

Haddox, one of the old school of smiths, refuses to let the production-manufactured shoe replace the hand-forged shoe.

"Shoes for human beings can be turned out in factory lots," he said, "but when it comes to horses a shoe must be built to actual measurements of the hoof to be perfectly satisfactory for the horse to get all the speed available out of his muscles."

New Ration For Birds

Scientists At Philadelphia Zoo Double Output Of Eggs

By a new scientific feeding basis, scientists at the Philadelphia zoo have been able to double the output of eggs from their hens and birds during the past year. The egg production has increased to such an extent that officials are in need of an incubator for hatching purposes.

The method is to feed the birds and hens what is known as basic ration No. 1, which consists of grain and vegetable meals, dried milk, minerals and cod liver oil.

One of the most remarkable cases at the zoo concerns the griffin vulture who hadn't laid an egg in 12 years. Fed basic ration No. 1 with a little meat, she laid an egg.

Sees Return Of Normal Times

Roger Babson Looks For Marked Recovery In Business

Roger W. Babson says business, after six years of depression, has at last reached normal, and that "for the next two or three years I am bullish on everything except democracy."

"Of course, I am bullish on democracy for the long pull," the business statistician told the advertising club of Boston. "Democracy will be the ultimate form of government. But today, due to unprincipled and selfish politicians, democracy has collapsed throughout pretty much of the entire world. Only a spiritual revival can prevent such a collapse in America."

For the fourth time since he began studying business curves 35 years ago, Babson said it had crossed the normal line and is back again to the average of 1925, '26 and '27.

"If the heavy industries and general building construction were active, business would be far above the normal line, approaching 1929 highs," he added.

He said 1936 will be the best since 1929 for automobiles and steel, and among lines equalling or exceeding 1929 peaks he cited retail trade, power production, cement and electrical appliances.

He predicted a sharp advance in the price of real estate, commodities and stocks, wages and interest rates, larger farm crops and a rise in railroad traffic.

A Wrong Headline

Gave Name The "Vinegar Bible" To Early Oxford Edition

The "Vinegar Bible" printed at Oxford by J. Baskett in 1716-7 takes its name from a headline of Luke, chapter 20, which appears as "The Parable of the Vinegar" instead of the "Vineyard". But the version had so many inaccuracies it became known as the "Basket-full of printers' errors."

The Oxford edition of 1805 became famous as the "to remain" edition. A proofreader was doubtful about a comma in Galatians 4:29 and the copy came back with a marginal note, "to remain." Thinking this meant for insertion in the text the printer made the verse read, "But as then he that was born after the flesh persecuted him that was born after the Spirit to remain even so as it is now."

Other errors in the "To remain" Bible include, "Rebecca arose and her camels" instead of damsels. "Who hath ears to ear," and "The fishes (instead of fishers) shall stand upon it."

Needs An Explanation

That he has heard 3,000 sermons in 37 years is the boast of a man in Wales, says the Brandon Sun. But at two sermons per Sunday, he should have heard about 3,850. Where was he on those 850 Sunday evenings? asked the Toronto Star.

Household Arts by Alice Brooks

They Are Made of But Two Pieces

PATTERN 5683

Three little kittens lost their mittens and here they are looking very happy anyhow. And well they may, for they know they'll bring joy to many a kiddie as well as to the needle-woman who'll find them made in no time. They, as well as the duck, are made of but two pieces with the clothes separate. Of course, one kitten alone makes an attractive toy, too. In pattern 5683 you will find a pattern and directions for making a 7 x 9½ inch kitten (they are all the same) and the 8 x 10 inch duck as well as all the clothes; material requirements.

To obtain this pattern send 20 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) to Household Arts Dept., Winnipeg Newspaper Union, 175 McDermot Ave., E., Winnipeg.

Seed Selection For Next Year's Grain Crop Is A Matter Of Prime Importance

No Real Answer

Sharks Will Attack And Kill But Not Always

Do sharks attack and kill men? There is probably no question over which there has been more dispute. The truth appears to be that this question cannot be answered with a simple yes or no. Colonel Hugh D. Wise, U.S. Army, retired, has some interesting opinions on this subject, as shark-fishing has been a life-time hobby with him. He has pursued his favorite sport in many waters in various parts of the world.

"Sharks," he says, "do not go forth to stalk men as cats do mice. Fish are the regular victims of even the most predatory sharks, and man, though probably an acceptable morsel, would be a most unexpected addition to their menus. Nevertheless, sharks do occasionally get him."

"There must be a more solid foundation than superstition and imagination for the general and real fear shared by practically all watermen, though few of them can cite cases of sharks attacks within their own personal knowledge."

"There are countless instances of the eating of dead men by sharks, and there are many reports of their attacks upon live men. Both our war department and our navy department officially report several such killings. Nevertheless, I have repeatedly seen soldiers from transported in shark-infested waters, swimming unharmed about the ship and thousands of tourists watch natives diving for pennies at tropical ports, where harbors are teeming with sharks, without ever seeing a diver harmed by one."

It is quite necessary to realize that there is a difference between shark bite and shark attack, and that lack of caution may, and often does, result in severe laceration from the teeth or in a terrific wallop from the tail of a frightened or wounded shark."

He cites numerous instances in which men were attacked and devoured and tells of cases where not only were swimming men seized, but also where sharks grabbed the oars or outriggers of boats.

Found First Ice Caves

Len Rossiter, a guide, was credited with discovering the first ice caves on Vancouver Island. Len explored remote corners of Forbidden Plateau for more than six years without results. He was "just looking around" when he found the caves on his last visit.

"A poor memory means a poor mind," says a famous psychologist.

While Canada as a whole will harvest a light grain crop this year, fortunately there are normal crops throughout the Maritime Provinces, in Quebec, and in certain areas in each of the other provinces. However, these crops will scarcely offset the shortages which exist in other parts of the country.

By judicious planning, states the Dominion Seed Commissioner, even a light crop may be used so advantageously that no serious inconveniences will be entailed. In so planning, first thought must be given to the seed supply for the following year, he explained. Indeed, seed supply is the prime consideration, whether the crop be light or abundant. When, as in 1936, the bulk of grain from which seed is to be selected is much less than normal, the matter of seed selection is paramount and should receive the early and careful consideration of farmers.

Some crops harvested may be almost entirely unfit for seed owing to lack of weight or because of injury to germination through weathering, but on most Canadian farms, at least part of the grain harvested will be of a quality fit for seed, if properly cleaned and graded.

Farmers who take stock of their grain supply soon after harvest and reserve, wherever possible, a portion of the best quality of their wheat, oats, barley or other grain for seed next year will not only benefit themselves but will perform a valued public service.

Planned His Own Meals

King Edward Puts Himself On Diet To Keep Fit

King Edward VIII, long the world's leader in men's fashions, has "gone on a diet" to keep the royal waistline down to its usual slenderness, according to close associates.

The King worked out the details of his diet himself.

Since following it, the King has told friends that he has lost several pounds and that his health and efficiency have improved 50 per cent.

King Edward VII, the present monarch's grandfather, became corpulent in his later years. This is said to have made a deep impression on his grandson.

The King's diet is:

Breakfast—Fruit, toast and tea with milk.

Lunch—Fruit (usually apples) and tea.

Dinner—Fish or meat and green vegetables.

His Majesty has a new rule never to drink alcohol before evening. Then he usually takes whisky and soda rather than cocktails. He carries with him his own special blend of tea.

"The cause of most ailments is overeating," the King is reported to have told friends. "Most men eat too much."

Echo Foretells Weather

Boatmen In Bavaria Believe It Can Predict Storm

St. Bartholomew, whose festival has just fallen, has a good reputation as a weather saint, the News of the World comments. According to proverbial lore: "All the tears that St. Swithun can cry, St. Bartholomew's mantle wipeth dry." As a weather prophet, St. Bartholomew is invoked all the year round by boatmen on a dangerous lake in Bavaria. Before venturing out they cry, "Holy Bartholomew, shall I return? Say 'Yes'." The echoes answer "Ya," a dozen times in fair weather, but remain silent when storms are brewing.

Trying To Obtain Credit

Italy is trying to obtain credit in London, but the British banks are said to be turning the cold shoulder. Premier Mussolini has such a nice way of backing up a request for a loan. He declares that he has an army of 8,000,000 men which he can mobilize at a few hours' notice if Britain will supply the funds.

The World of Wheat.

By H. G. L. STRANGE

Director "Crop Testing Plan."

The wealth, welfare and prosperity of farmers, and indeed of all of us, in Western Canada depend mainly upon the sale each year to foreign countries of large quantities of Canadian wheat at satisfactory prices.

Between 200 and 300 million bushels a year, it seems to me, will have to be exported if a reasonable standard of living for our producers and other people is to be assured.

Our large annual sales in the past have depended upon the buyers in no less than 72 different countries demanding or "wanting" Canadian wheat. Our problem, then, can be stated very simply. It is that somehow we must induce the buyers of 72 countries to "want" between 200 and 300 million bushels of Canadian wheat each year, and to pay a reasonable price for it. Can this be done? Yes, I at least believe it can, provided for one thing—that we maintain, and if possible increase, the present margin of quality or "strength" that Canadian wheat enjoys over the "strength" of all other wheats in the world. But we must remember that meanwhile other countries are steadily improving the quality of their own newer wheats. Canada, therefore will undoubtedly have to increase the efforts she is now making in order even to maintain her present superiority in wheat quality.

The recent substantial increase in the price of wheat has been brought about by the complete disappearance of the "burdensome" world surplus that has tended so to depress world prices since 1930.

Rainfall that may occur in Australia and the Argentine in the next few weeks is the most important factor now governing world price. If abundant rains soon occur the world price of wheat will probably fall. If generous rains do not soon fall, however, the price will probably rise still further. The Buenos Aires "Futures" market for the moment is an excellent price barometer.

Credit House Act In Force.

Last Friday the Aherhart government proclaimed its legislation providing for state credit houses, an integral part of its social credit financial set-up. It was proclaimed formally in the Alberta Gazette.

The legislation, passed at the special session in August, provided for state credit houses in each of the provincial constituencies. They will act as a sort of bank, where social credit dividends will be distributed, debited and credited in individual accounts. One of their functions, as set forth in the legislation, will be to accept deposits of money to be transferred into provincial credit.

The first credit houses will be established in a block of eleven or twelve constituencies north of Red Deer and including Edmonton, Provincial Secretary Manning said. It was intended to have them in operation by November 15th for the acceptance of deposits, but not necessarily for the distribution of dividends.

Have You Registered?

There is only one more week in which relatives of ratepayers and tenants in the town and school district may register, and the Voters' List will be closed October 31st.

A good many persons are under the impression that because they were registered last year it was not necessary to register again. According to the Town Act it is necessary for all relatives and tenants to register each year, otherwise their names will not appear on the voters' list and they will be deprived of their vote at the town elections in 1937.

Up to the present time there has been only a small sign-up. If you are a tenant or a relative of a ratepayer—call the town secretary's office right away and register.

Below is a copy of the notice calling for registration:

NOTICE

Items of Interest

Member of the Alberta legislature for Taber, James Hansen, Social Credit representative, has been read out of the party, according to a statement issued last week by Mr. R. Turner of Bow Island, president of the Taber Constituency Social Credit Association. The statement was confirmed.

Forty head of Shorthorn cattle from His Majesty's Ranch at Pekisko were shipped to the farm of T. A. Russell at Downsview, a mile north of Toronto, where they were auctioned last weekend. The sale is in no way a dispersal of the stock on the royal ranch, but reflects the current feed shortage. Manager W. L. Carlyle announced.

George Pogmore, farmer and truckman, was shot and killed on Sunday night as he sat playing cards with his wife and children in his farm home 7 miles southwest of Byemore. The shot, fired through a window, struck Pogmore in the head and he died instantly. Police called in from Stettler so far have been unable to trace the killer. Pogmore, father of six children and well liked in the district, is not known to have had any enemies. Byemore is about 35 miles southeast of Stettler.

Hopes of the Alberta government of receiving $248,900 additional subsidy this year from the Dominion treasury, as a result of increased population, were dashed by the announcement from Ottawa of further quinquennial census reports given out by the Dominion bureau of statistics. The actual increase in subsidy will be only $4,013.

A new all-time high record for unemployment in Alberta for the month of October was set last week when 11,057 men and women were registered as workless, according to the report of the provincial government employment service for the week ended October 10.

Obligations referred to by Premier Aberhart in a recent speech at Hanna which, he said, the provincial government might not be able to meet on their maturing date on November 1st, are said to include $1,250,000 six per cent bonds due on that date, and $1,000,000 four per cent bonds due November 25th.

H. P. Wright of Airdrie last week sold 300 bushels of Red Bobs certified seed wheat to the Russian government for direct shipment to Moscow. Mr. A. S. Essipov, chief of the State Plant Breeding Fund, visited the Wright farm and personally made the purchase.

FACT 2: The United Church of Canada has more preaching places than there are stations of the two great Canadian railways combined. To maintain at full efficiency each of these thousands of preaching stations is indeed a great responsibility. To know that they are there in these days of perplexity and strain, gives us the feeling that our deepest needs are being met, for it is still true that after men have been fed and clothed and housed they need something more, and that need can only be met by the loving fellowship and friendship of Jesus Christ who said, "Without Me ye can do nothing."

"BUY IN DIDSBURY"

Policyholders

Own the "Assets"

of Life Insurance Companies

AS a great co-operative enterprise, Life Insurance has built up Assets in Canada totalling, approximately, two billion dollars. Yet these Assets are relatively small when it is realized that they are jointly owned by about 3,500,000 policyholders—one-third of Canada's population.

On the average, each policyholder owns $571 as his share of the total Assets in Life Companies operating in Canada. Obviously, the great majority of policyholders are men and women of ordinary means—thrifty people who, year by year, have entrusted to Life Insurance part of their savings so that they may have financial security against the uncertain future.

These policyholders represent the best type of Canadian citizens. They have sought to preserve their financial independence, and, as thrifty citizens, neither they nor their dependants are ever likely to become charges upon government or municipal relief.

To protect the interests of these 3,500,000 Canadian policyholders, Life Insurance Companies have invested their Assets in government and municipal bonds—in first mortgages—in public utilities and industrial enterprises—and in other authorized securities.

The soundness of the Investment policy of the Companies has been tried and proven during periods of severe financial stress. Governing and corporate bodies in which policyholders' moneys are invested have, until recently, maintained the integrity of their obligations. This has made it possible in turn for the companies, in their capacity as trustees for the policyholders, to fulfill every obligation guaranteed by their policies.

Now, however, there is a growing tendency to repudiate, by legislation, public and private debts, regardless of the debtor's ability to pay. Legislation which tends to destroy the ownership of public and private property places an unjust burden upon life insurance policyholders.

Acted As Guide

Duchess Of York Once Discharged Duties Of Maid

H. R. H. the Duchess of York knows in minute detail the history of ancient Glamis Castle, where she spent most of her happy girlhood and once used her knowledge to play a practical joke. A short while before her marriage, when a party of Americans visited Glamis, she borrowed a maid's cap and apron and discharged the duties of guide so admirably that the visitors were delighted. Little guessing the true identity of the "maid", they tendered her a very handsome tip, which she was compelled to accept in order to keep her secret.

Workers Who Fill Radium Needles Have Trying Job

If you had to take three months' rest with pay every time you worked three months, wouldn't you like it? Maybe yes, and maybe no. Not if you had a job filling needles with radium. The workers have to stand behind lead screened cases, into which only their hands go. Minute particles of radium salts are coaxed into small, specially constructed needles. These are later used for implantation in diseased tissues.

Two Sides To Story

Human Body Not Fitted For Modern Craze For Speed

Four thousand miles, from New York to Central Europe, in five days! That was the record achieved by the recent test in which a specially-chartered Imperial Airways air-liner met the liner, Queen Mary, at Cherbourg, and flew with a party of passengers via Paris, Munich and Vienna to Budapest. As soon as the ocean liner reached Cherbourg, the party which were to make the 1,020-mile flight to Budapest were conveyed by motor launch to the aerodrome where the air-liner was waiting. Within an hour and a quarter they were in Paris, a distance of 209 miles. Zurich, 306 miles, was reached at lunch-time. In less than an hour they reached Munich, then on to Vienna and Budapest, at a speed reaching 170 miles an hour. A radio-telegraph service now enables passengers by air, sea or land to keep in touch with each other and with the world. Government officials flying along Empire routes can receive and send messages while they travel. Business heads can keep in touch with their headquarters throughout the journey. But there is another side to all this story of ever-increasing speed. The human body was not built for working or playing at the rate suggested by this way of living. —The New Outlook.

Treasures From Japan

Priceless Objects Being Loaned For Exhibition In Boston

Two of the great cultural institutions of the United States, the Boston Museum of Fine Arts and Harvard University, have been honored by the Japanese Emperor.

As a tribute to these educational centres, Japan is allowing the exhibition in Boston of some of her priceless art treasures. The exhibit is to continue until October 25.

Besides the examples of painting and sculpture on loan from the imperial household and Japanese museums and art schools, there are many valuable Japanese art treasures owned by the Boston Museum. It was because of the great interest the museum of fine arts has shown in Japanese art for more than 50 years, and because of the tercentenary of Harvard that the treasures were allowed to come to Boston as a tribute of the Japanese people.

The collection consists of 136 objects. They represent the finest in Japanese art from the beginning of Buddhist art in Japan in the seventh century to the close of the Tokugawa period in the middle of the nineteenth century.

Coronation Ceremonies

Question Is Raised As To Whether Queen Mary Will Attend

The question whether Queen Mary will attend the coronation of her son, King Edward VIII, next May is being discussed with some animation. The answer seems to lie entirely in the personal desires of Queen Mary and His Majesty.

There is no precedent in England for a widowed queen attending the coronation of her husband's successor but amongst members of the royal family of the present and immediately preceding generation precedent often has been jettisoned.

Queen Alexandra, widow of King Edward VII, did not attend the coronation of King George V. and Queen Mary in 1911, although there was talk at the time that her absence was solely against her own will.

The present position is somewhat different, as there is no queen consort to the crown.

His Favorite Song

King Edward Requested Three Encores In Vienna Club

King Edward has a favorite song — and it deals with the rustic life of Austrian peasants.

His Majesty heard the song in a night club in Vienna and requested three encores after which he tipped the performer liberally.

"That's my favorite song," he said. The song, in dialect, refers to the lower Austrian village of Langenlains, near Vienna.

The death's head moth, now rarely seen, emits squeaks almost as loud as those of a mouse. 2170

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas builds up your stomach. You get constipated. Harmful poisons go into the body, and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks pink.

A more bowel movement doesn't always get at the cause. You need something that works on the liver as well. It takes these good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get those two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless and gentle, they make the bile flow freely. They do the work of calomel but have no calomel or mercury in them. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name! Stubbornly refuse anything else. See.

Circumstantial Evidence

British Author Gives Reason For Dismissing Rumor About King Edward's Marriage

Renewed rumors that King Edward VIII. of England would get married, maybe to Princess Irene or Princess Catherine, sisters of King George II. of Greece, was indignantly dismissed by John Drinkwater, noted British author who writes a weekly piece about Edward for a London magazine.

On the subject of the King's marriage Drinkwater writes: "We have reasonable circumstantial evidence that the King at present is contemplating no such step. His new suite at Buckingham Palace, in the preparation of which he has taken elaborate care, is designed for the accommodation of his existing bachelor establishment. That in itself should be an indication of his intentions."

Drinkwater continues: "If the King decides to marry, official announcements will be made immediately. Anyone outside the King's family circle professing to have inside information is not worth listening to."

Although 50 per cent. of France's population is engaged in agriculture, production is not sufficient for demand.

Airways Traffic Control

United States Uses Radio To Avoid Congestion In Air Lanes

Traffic cops have finally taken over the United States sky lanes.

It hasn't reached the no-parking stage yet, but the bureau of air commerce is rapidly setting up an airways traffic control system which directs 'planes as the policeman at the corner bosses autoists.

Each station has a large map showing the air routes in and out of airports. A couple of men study maps, ear-phones over their heads and their eyes fixed on a sea of tiny wooden tabs representing ships.

Along half a dozen routes, measured in inches instead of miles, 'planes move at various rates of speed.

One of the watchers sees six 'planes moving on an airport within a few minutes of one another. Methodically he takes charge of the situation.

By radio he pushes the nearest one down to a lower level, the next to a level a little higher than the rest, the third to a still higher level and so on. If this is not sufficient to avoid congestion, he reduces the speed of one or two.

A Dangerous Plaything

Many Children Have Been Blinded By Toy Guns

The air-gun or B.B. gun and the sling-shot, so coveted by boys and so freely advertised by certain conscienceless business houses, are responsible not only for the death of hundreds of beautiful and useful birds, but for sad and permanent injuries to others. A circular issued by the Illinois Congress of Parents and Teachers states that in one institution for the blind, there are 300 children who will never see again because their eyes were put out by toy guns.—Our Dumb Animals.

"The person who waits 24 hours or more in a theatre queue," says an essayist, "is usually regarded as something of a figure of fun." A sort of standing joke, in fact.

Tip For Story Writers

Halifax Physician Tells How To Hold Readers' Interest

"The invariable and never failing recipe for a story is to get your hero into trouble as soon as you can, and keep him there until the last possible moment," Dr. H. B. Atlee, Halifax physician and nationally known short story writer, said in an address before a service club.

"Read your Bible and you will find that, even there, this principle is carried out," the fiction writer remarked. "Daniel in the lion's den and many other stories therein follow this style."

The life of a short story writer was "no bed of roses" continued the author, who has been tapping out fiction on his typewriter for the past 20 years. He started writing during the war. "At such a time human life is the cheapest of commodities. Great care is taken of ammunition and guns and other equipment, but the poor human being is sacrificed with very little thought. This condition always has made me good and sore and when I returned from the eastern front, I wrote many of my experiences."

"For a long time, rejection slips flooded into my study, but I finally sold a story and the writing bug was firmly entrenched in me."

Built Below Ground

Church In France Has Graveyard On The Roof

St. Emilion is the only place which can boast a church with the graveyard in the roof.

The monolith church, which will soon be completing its twelfth century of existence, is built entirely underground and is probably the largest so constructed.

It was hewn out of rock by Saint Emilion the Hermit, in the eighth century; the tower which rises out of the graveyard is in fact the steeple of the church below. This and the entrance portal are the only outward signs; all the rest is hollowed out of solid rock.

The interior is divided into three naves. The total length is 124 feet and the breadth is sixty-five feet. The roof, that is the ground level, where is the graveyard, is fifty-two feet high and the steeple rises a further 200 feet above that.

After 12 years' research, an Iowan has discovered 35,000 relatives. An easier way would have been to win on a sweepstake ticket.

A new and beautiful variety of perpetual carnation has been named after the Duchess of Gloucester.

Thou Shalt Not Love

— A NOVEL BY —
GEORGIA GRAIG

Advance notices had been plentiful and alluring about the event at which "Play-Girl," was to make her debut, take off her mask, as it were, and face the world she had flouted. She had been living in New York for some time, the newspapers discovered—with the help of Michael Fairbourne in charge of the Tarrance Publishing Company's publicity department—and because she had become the most-talked-of, and up to then, retiring, of all anonymous celebrities, it was fitting that she should come out of that retirement with a flourish of publicity trumpets.

Everybody was curious about "Play-Girl." Some insisted that she would be discovered to be some sex-starved and disappointed old maid who had soothed her repressions through the imagery of her book. Others voted for a blase divorcee—several were openly mentioned—while still others insisted there was no "Play-Girl" at all (they got it from authentic sources, of course) but that the whole book was a symposium of collected experiences which had been ghosted by the firm's own Beatrice Fairfax who was, they were assured, fat and well past fifty with several quite up and coming grandchildren. It was hard for anyone to believe that there really existed in the flesh any young and beautiful woman who could have sinned as violently as "Play-Girl" and then cold-bloodedly and analytically have written about her experiences, playing with them with the same skill that a surgeon exhibits in wielding a scalpel.

At all events, it was inevitable that everyone wanted to be among the first to see "Play-Girl" when the Tarrance Company introduced her to an eagerly awaiting public.

On the night of Starr's debut, therefore, the grand ball room at Pierre's was crowded. Everybody who was anybody socially, and modern enough to be seen where "Play-Girl" was seen, was there. Hoi polloi would get their chances later, and have an opportunity to chase after her when she went to theatres and night clubs, pressing upon her their autograph books as though she were a movie celebrity. In fact, before "Play-Girl" made her appearance, she was more exploited than any cinema star, for while they only portrayed the emotions of stories, "Play-Girl" had lived hers. And still lived to tell the story.

With all the fanfare preceding her, Starr made a poised, effective entrance the night of her debut, descending the steps from the balcony to the ballroom, scarlet-tipped fingers resting lightly on the arm of Michael Fairbourne.

Her gown was a seductive sheath of clinging black chiffon velvet, daintily cut, a startling foil for the misty pallor of her face. She had been sitting on one of her low chairs beside an inlaid table when Michael had come for her and he had stared. Starr recalled how he had shaded his eyes, looking at her, surveying her from her cloud of black hair to the table edge. She had asked him, at the surprised look in his eyes:

"D-d-don't you like my frock?"

And Michael: "I was just looking for it."

It was that kind of debut frock, a daring modiste's triumph.

Her face, with the camelia skin, was as perfect as a cameo carved out of ivory. Her mouth was a painted, scarlet smile. The long black eyes—so perfect to carry out all those stories about her royal Egyptian ancestry—were as deeply mysterious as those of any pictured priestess. And a soft mass of unrestrained, cloudy black curls added an oddly naive note to a picture of worldly sophistication. The one touch of color was the enameled necklace and bracelet which at a glance appeared of fabulous worth as antiques.

That was how Starr Ellison looked on the occasion of her debut into the glittering night life of New York, highly social, or otherwise. Starr Ellison, the infamous "Play-Girl!"

A long murmur of interest that almost held a touch of awe greeted the arrival of the astonishingly lovely young woman who had at last cast off her anonymity in a sensational burst of publicity. It broke immediately into little individual murmurs.

From the men:
"Gorgeous!"
"I'd like to meet her!"
"I've got to meet her! No long distance worshipping for me!"
"Snappy number, eh, what?"
"If there's a good Egyptian sample, no wonder old Marc Antony went haywire!"

From the women:
"Brazen hussy!"
"You wouldn't think she'd dare to come here or any place else with the reputation she's got!"
"As if it isn't bad enough to have lived the kind of life she's lived without writing her experiences for everybody to read!"

"I can well believe that about her Egyptian blood. They've always been decadent, I've read!"

"And they say that terrible book has made her a fortune, my dear!"
It was quite natural that some of the remarks should reach the girl on the steps, but she betrayed no embarrassment. Black eyes beneath unbelievable long, dusky lashes swept the ballroom with a glance of contemptuous mockery, with an odd, disdainful aloofness with which some long-gone princess might have looked on her slaves.

Her painted smile never wavered. She turned and whispered to the man at her side something which her audience took to be one of the sarcastic witticisms of the variety with which her book was spiced:

What Starr Ellison actually said was:
"Michael-Hassan, I'm scared! My legs feel wobbly. I don't think I can walk a step farther."

Warm gray eyes reassured her. Michael patted her hand. Scared little siren with the heart of a child. He hadn't thought of it in that light before. . . . Didn't know the thought had been coming to him by degrees during their intimacy of the preparation days—He had been preferring to remember where he had found her—Rot, all of it! She had been a La Luna habitue. . . . "Nough said."

He whispered tensely:
"Keep your courage, kid. You're doing great. Cleopatra herself couldn't have knocked them any deader!" Then his eyes narrowed as he shot her a quick glance. "And for the love of mud, don't call me 'Hassan'. . . . Some of them might not understand that—"

Starr's long eyes passed over him slowly.

"I understand, Has—Michael. Don't let it worry you. Everybody will understand that your interest in 'Play-girl' is because you're so loyal to the interests of your firm."

Michael flushed at the unexpected rebuff, but said nothing. Perhaps he had made a mistake in assuming with the girl an air of camaraderie. After all, theirs was a most meticulous business arrangement.

In short order Starr was introduced to more people than she could ever hope to remember. It was bewildering. She was conscious all the time, too, of an undercurrent of antagonism, disapproval in too many cases. She knew she was being measured by her reputation. The kiss-and-tell girl.

Men ogled her, drinking in her fragile loveliness. Some of them managed to inject an undertone of suggestiveness beneath their most casual remarks.

Starr understood. They were wondering how far they could go; they were trying her out. They were fancying themselves in the role of this famous beauty's newest play-partner. She, who had never had a love affair in her life, could have taken her pick of twenty lovers that night had she chosen to offer the slightest encouragement.

The women were on their guard; conversation stilted, eyes on their men, as though mortally afraid that their own husbands or sweethearts would be "Play-Girl's" next game.

It was strange, this being the centre of attraction. It was a strange undertaking upon which she had embarked. Starr was most uncertain in her own mind whether this kind of "playing" was a game worth the candle of luxurious living. For six months. But she had to go on. Must!

Starr felt a hand draw her from out a circle of curious admirers and turned to face Michael. And a girl. In the girl's eyes was that touch of interest that is usually in the eyes of a juvenile scientist with a butterfly on a pin. The girl smiled oddly and slowly.

"So you are 'Play-Girl'?" she drawled. "Well, I am certainly interested to meet you!"
Starr heard Michael murmuring the name of Stephanie Dale in the moment she noticed that Stephanie substituted "interested" for the conventional "pleased." There was an unpleasant infection in the imperious voice; further unpleasantness in her haughty mien.

She made her remark much in the manner she might have said, "How interesting!" viewing the freaks in a sideshow through a jeweled lorgnette.

The girl Michael wanted to marry was a slim, pink and white blond. Her eyes were as brilliantly blue as sapphires, and as cold. She wore all white, and looked like a pale hot-house flower against Starr's vivid coloring.

Starr felt a vague quickening of her pulses. Of all the people she had met this night, Stephanie Dale was the first to register indelibly in her consciousness.

Strange Civic Custom

The strangest civic custom of modern times is still practiced in Lhasa, Tibet. The privilege of being mayor of the city for the first 23 days of the year is sold by auction. The highest bidder assumes his mayoral duties, rules the city as he thinks fit, and keeps all the money he can raise through additional taxation and fancy fines.

"Thunder Mountain," picturization of Zane Grey's latest novel of the same title, is the attraction at the local theatre this Friday and Saturday.

An action-packed spectacular outdoor romance its locale is an Idaho mining town in the 'eighties. Semi-historical in character, its characters are colorful and it is given lavish production. Photographed in the high Sierra mountains, where a modern gold strike duplicates many of the scenes in the story, the picture promises to feature many natural and beautiful outdoor backgrounds. Bristling with action and adventure it will feature such thrilling sequences as the avalanche of Thunder Mountain down on a mining camp; battles of the claim jumpers, the gold stampede, a series of physical conflicts and a thrilling chase leading to a suspense-laden court scene in the Miners' Court as history-making decisions are handed down.

George O'Brien is the star. The strong supporting cast includes Barbara Fritchie, who shares the romantic angle with O'Brien. The only other woman in the story is Frances Grant, former stage and Ziegfeld star. Spotted in important roles are Morgan Wallace, Dean Benton, Edward LeSaint, William Bailey and George Hayes.

Modern Baby Complaint.

Little Emily was hearing her new baby brother freely exercising his lungs for the first time and was much distressed by the phenomenon. "Mamma," she said in an awed voice, "ain't the poor little fellow got static something awful?"

"As Others See Us."

By L. J. W.

When the song has gone out of your heart, my boy,
And life throws an indigo hue;
When gall-bitter now, recollections return,
A-gnawing your heartstrings in two;
When nothing whatever to giggle about
You swear on this orb you can find—
Just shoot a game squint at the old looking-glass
And you'll probably alter your mind.
What now! Is it really the facts I behold?
A man grown, strutting a spoiled baby's pout,
And face long, sufficient for three.
O miracle wonders! You'll banish the groan
And jiggle with mirth I well know;
While out of that speaker pathetically grim
Like magic a smiler will grow.
And the old looking-glass, it will tackle your bluff,
A-swapping you grin for grin;
Till just what the dickens you'll wonder occurred
So grouchy the day to begin.
For the old looking glass is an honest good sport
That neither will flatter nor fake,
But straight truths deliver in quantities right
To those who the lessons will take.
